editor's note

I play shit guitar, but I enjoy it immensely- in fact singing while playing guitar (alone in my room) is universally accepted as one of life's greatestpleasures. The one song I can play, and play well is- I give you three seconds to guess it, and I bet my soul you'll get it right- is Wonderwall by Oasis. OF COURSE it is. This E, G, C, D, A (suspended) Capo On 2nd Fret DDDDUU-DUDDUDUDUDUDUDUDUDU song is the first thing you learn on guitar. In fact, all the information given here is enough to teach you how to play it even if you've never held a guitar in your life. There are very few friends I've played guitar in front of, and the ones I have, its always Wonderwall. You get the whole girl experience when I'm serenading you with some off-key Wonderwall. Funnily enough, the people I play it for are quite impressed in my abilities, which goes on two show things (1) said people do not know jack about music (2) said people have jack standards for me. Either way, I played it for my mum, she was impressed. Played it for my brother and he think I'm a skilled individual. Played it for a couple of friends over video call, and one cried. I looked at my hands and I thought, am I the best Wonderwall player on the planet? How is he so moved? My friend in a cracked voice then calls upon the stupidity of the fact that he was with me when I bought my guitar and played Wonderwall on it for the first timeand he was with me before that through the absolute chaos that is high school. Now, he has not seen me in two years, has come to terms with the possibility that the we will never meet again, that work friends as a concept does not exist, that we have already made (and lost) about 99% of close friendships we'll ever have, its 3:30am, WONDERWALL ON VIDEO CALL. It's just one of those things. I bet Oasis never realised this would happen.

Weekly Special

it's 7 am, i have a cup of coffee, rush to college... it's 11 am, im in front of the canteen, deliberating, i cave... cup 2. i attend my classes, go to the library to read the newspaper, it's 4, i long for another coffee. i go back, make myself a cup. it's a 5 minute affair. i tear the sachet, mix the contents, add the water and swirl the glass, shaken not stirred, i couldn't be bothered to use a spoon. it's like punctuation. breaks. perhaps the only time i am mindful. a comma, maybe not a period. it separates periods. divides my days into parts. i wake up thinking about coffee, i go to bed thinking about it. it's not coffee i am thinking about, it is routine, but is it really?
